Simple Operations Fitted Together

The business of Swift & Company is the fitting together of many simple operations.

No one thing in a packing business is particularly difficult for men trained to do it; but no one thing is enough.

Thousands of other operations, properly performed, are necessary for the completed processes. And someone must fit together all these thousands of simple operations.

The success with which a packing business performs its function of supplying the best possible meat products to the consumer with the greatest possible benefit to both him and the producer depends upon the energy, brains, experience, and faithful effort of the men trained in the business.

Swift & Company turns the producer's live stock into meat for the consumer at a profit of only a fraction of a cent a pound, because it fits these operations together with the least waste, overlapping, and friction.

Do you believe government direction could do better?

MEMORIES OF SAM DOWLING

Sam Dowling, whose body was found in a lot back of the Riverside hotel in Reno recently, was purser of the Pacific Mail steamship Golden Gate, on its down trip from San Francisco to Panama, when it burned and sank off the coast of Manzanillo, at Point White Rock, forty miles from Mazatlan, Mexico, July 12, 1902. The vessel caught fire at about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and the captain headed it for shore, after vainly endeavoring to put out the fire. The vessel got within about 800 feet from shore, when it could proceed no further. The officers and crew and as many passengers as could get aboard the small boats, and rowed to Mazatlan. About 200 passengers lost their lives by fire or drowning, and about fifty swam ashore—Mrs. Davis, John, father of Alfred Chariz, swam ashore, swimming behind a Spanish priest, who was swimming with a little child, named Glen, whose parents were burned on the ship. The surf was heavy, and the priest failed to make it with the child and they were separated. Mr. Chariz caught the child, and the priest got to shore, rested briefly, returned to the surf and helped both Mr. Chariz and child to shore. Many of the wrecked attempted to make their way through the thick chapparal to Mazatlan, but returned, bleeding in foot and limb to shore. Before reaching shore they espied the steamer St. Louis on its return trip to San Francisco, and they waved flags on poles, and were observed, the fact being that the crew was on the lookout for wrecked, having been advised by those who had reached Mazatlan by boats. After many attempts, a hawser was finally fastened at shore, and all the survivors were finally safely got aboard the boat, and returned to San Francisco. Mr. Chariz reshipped on the next steamer, the Golden Age, returned to Canada, and brought out his family, four children, across the plains, to California. In 1863, As late as that year, Indians used to ride into St. Joseph, Missouri, painted and nearly naked and upon crossing the Missouri, one plunged into the Indian country. The emigrants used to form large trains, and had regular guards, scouts and drilling, but Mr.
Chariz crossed alone with his children and without a single weapon, and was not molested. The Golden Gate carried much gold and its passengers were mostly retiring miners, who were returning with what they considered enough. So, probably every decade since the disaster, excursions have been gotten up to find the hulk but all without any results, so far as finding gold is concerned.
Mr. Chariz always believed the Mexicans got it, and always refused to enter into any of the adventures.

Mr. Dowling was a man of smiles.
His eyes, his mouth, his heart, his words, his being were all smiles. It is difficult to think he did not smile in death and face of death.
